KEEP EXPLORING

- Think about what you love doing when no one is telling you what to do. Your hobbies are clues to careers you might like.
- Every person you meet—your dentist, the person fixing a power line, or a software developer—is a walking library of information. Ask people about their jobs.
- Build your "Power Skills" - things like curiosity, adaptability, empathy, resilience, communication, critical thinking, and time management
- Try things out (even the hard stuff) - Learning what you like and don't can help you find a career that will make you happy for the rest of your life. Don't be afraid to try a new club, sport, or instrument.

Stay curious, keep learning, and remember: you have plenty of time to decide who you want to be!
